Former U.S. attorneys, state prosecutors and criminal defense lawyers are key members of our white collar defense practice. Our attorneys have handled every phase of the criminal process from initial investigations and grand jury proceedings to trials and appeals. Because white collar criminal charges often involve complex business, financial and legal issues, our criminal defense teams frequently include lawyers with concentrated experience in substantive legal fields such as:

- Antitrust
- Health care fraud and abuse
- Securities laws
- Tax laws
- Environmental laws

We represent corporations, executives, key employees, institutional health care providers, medical groups, doctors, business taxpayers, individual taxpayers, attorneys and accountants. We also strongly believe in and provide substantive and not superficial preventative services, such as investigations, legal audits, corporate compliance programs, compliance planning, and implementation and training programs.
